Treating the Endocrine System with Acupuncture and Chinese Medicine

Presented by Jeffrey Yuen

This weekend seminar will focus on integrating theories of the endocrine system with Chinese medicine. There will be a focus on the inter-relationship between the glands and their energetic similarities to the features of the Zang-Fu, particularly the San Jiao. Participants will develop strategies using acupuncture and herbal applications to treat endocrine issues relating to immunity, autoimmunity, neurology and psychology.

The endocrine system of biomedicine is closely related to the concepts and theories articulated by the Jin-Ye within the perspective of Chinese medicine. The relationship of Ye-Thick fluids to the Jing-Essence and their impact on the processes of human development, physiology and aging conveys some of the functions associated with the hormonal secretions of our body. More importantly, the attributes associated with the Jin-Ye to Xue-Blood and their respective Zang-Fu (as well as the Curious Fu) relationship clarify for the practitioner of Chinese medicine a better understanding of some of the major issues clinically seen pertaining to the endocrine system. These include diabetes, hypo/hyper thyroid, growth issues, osteoporosis and polycystic ovary syndrome.

Day 1

- The Jin-Ye and correlations with Jing-Essence
- Correlations between Jin-Ye and Xue-Blood
- Model to Integrate Jin-Ye, Blood and Qi
- Relationships to the Zang-Fu and Curious Fu
- Interface with the Glandular Model of Biomedicine
